Israel on Guerrillas

TEL AVIV, May 6 (Reuters). An Israeli military spokesman said bere today that the Arab guerrillas' campaign was marked by a succession of failures this year which they tried to hide behind a screen of fictitious victory announcements.

The guerrillas had been forced to restrict their activities to firing and shelling across the cease-fire lines, while only 3.3 percent of all their actions since January this year occurred inside Israeli territory, he added.

The decrease in guerrilla activity, due to Israeli security measures "is accompanied by terrorist pretensions of dynamic progress in their fight," the spokesman said.

"No such progress is recognizable except in their fictitions announcements according to which they brought down 24 Israeli aircraft and destroyed 58 tanks between that men with numbers from 1 April 4 1969 and April 4 1970," he through 122 were certain to be drafted; that men with numbers "With such obvious flights of the

Rhetoric and the Guns

The deaths of four manifestly innocent students at Kent State University was the kind of senseless tragedy that has long been feared on campuses in turmoil. It was not even a Napoleonic whiff of grapeshot, that drastic remedy for civil disordere which so appeals to authoritarians and is so dreaded by a democracy. Frightened men with guns fired at a group of suddenly frightened students, and the dead and wounded lay on the ground. But what might otherwise have been a pathetic irrelevance finds its place in the fevered rhetoric of the Cambodian crisis: a flaming exclamation point.

The rhetoric itself has had its own irrelevance. When President Nixon invested what is essentially a border raid against enemy supplies and communications with overtones of victory and national honor, he overstated his case. And when Premier Kosygin (bland)y ignoring the earlier installation of North Vietnamese troops on Cambodian soil) spoke in terms of shock and horror at American violations of a longlost neutrality, he indulged in the same-or rather worse-oratorical fallacy. Much of the argument over the Cambodian affair has been marked by eimilar verbal overkill.

But there are certain hard facts underlying the words. One of these-most pertinent to Mr. Nixon's present dilemma-is that his silent majority does not, and never has included enough of the young men who are expected to do the fighting. Youth might have been diverted to some extent by the Nixon policy of withdrawal; it has been predictably galvanized into new action by Camcodia-and into very real fury by the shooting at Kent.

It does no good to present to these militants against the war the facts that the Cambodian palace revolution created a new situation, or to state the strategic case for intervention there. That the United States had a "right" to attack the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong sandtuaries; that the nossible fall of Cambodia to a no longer even avowedly neutralist Prince Sihanouk poses a threat to South Vietnam; that a North Vietnam, still obstinate diplomatically and overextended militarily, might be vulnerable to such attacks as have been directed into Cambodia-all of this has nothing to do with their main concern: End the war.

And, like so many other ventures hopefully launched in Vietnam, it is quite possible that the Cambodian incursion may only worsen the situation. The very limitations Mr. Nixon has imposed—no penetration deeper than 21 miles, without congressional approval; withdrawal in from three to seven weeks handicap the effort. No substantial enemy forces have been trapped; no effect is detectable on the drive against Phnom Penh; Hanoi has received massive diplomatic support from Moscow and Peking, which may well be translated into greater military aid. Militarily, and at the conference table, the President's gamble shows, as yet, no signs of paying off. And at home the bill is just being presented.

The Aftermath of Kent State

It is almost beyond belief that the ultimate tragedy in the opposition of young people to the war in Vietnam came in the heartland of America. But there, on the placid campus of Kent State, shots were fired and four students died. The other campus tragedies of recent years happened at places like Spartanburg where the racial instincts of the Old South beld sway or on the coasts where the climate has long been regarded as more hospitable for political militancy and disruption. Thus they could be brushed aside as aherrations by some Americans. But Kent State cannot be brushed aside. It is in the great center of the country where those who disregarded the earlier incidents have argued that reason and moderation reign and where that great mass of silent students dwell. Yet it is there that four students died Monday afternoon. The country will be a long time getting over this,

It is not enough now to brush this incident aside, as the President did Monday night, with the comment that "when dissent turns to violence it invites tragedy." Nor is it enough to blame the shootings on the conduct of the National Guard. Dissent of this same kind has turned to violence before -at Chicago in 1968, at Columbia before that, at other universities at other times without death being the predictable outcome. The National Guard has stood tall on other occasions-at Chicago in 1968 and at Oxford, Miss., in 1962.

Of course, it is necessary to find out why the shooting began. Was it necessary to dispatch the Guardsmen to the campus with loaded weapons? Were those troops physically exhausted, and thus more likely to respond too quickly to provocation, as the first stories indicated? Were shots fired at the troops? Were the troops in danger of serious bodily harm when the firing began? But these, in the larger framework of what is happening in America now, are subsidiary questions. All of us, from the President on down, need to understand better why the students are in the streets and why it is necessary for the young men of the National Guard to confront at gunpoint the young men and women of the universities. Even while we ponder that, however, this administration and this capital must face the immediate problem of the aftermath of Kent State.

As best we can determine, young peoplenot just students and not just radical students-will soon be rolling into Washington in order to bring their protests direct to the President this weekend. The danger is clear, There is little time for the careful planning. that has gone into other major demonstrations in Washington's recent history, little time for the negotiations over routes and places, little time for the gathering of moderate demonstrators to act as crowd

If another Kent State is to be avoided this weekend on the lawns of Washington, sharp responses of the past. The administration must listen, try to understand and sympathize with at least the right to dissent. It needs to display calmness and a sense of compassion, not hostility and fear toward those who disagree with its positions.

Something is also needed from those more sympathetic than the administration to the demands of the young people. This is leadership of the kind that President Brewster gave to Yale last weekend, leadership that can only be given by the vast majority of the academic community that opposes the war and that also opposes violence. One way in which this kind of leadership might be brought to bear would be to turn this weekend's demonstration into a memorial service for the students who died on Monday. That kind of demonstration could serve to remind all of us that this war is opposed not by just "bucas" and Communists and wild radicals but by a large percentage of that silent student majority which Mr. Brewster identified and which populates campuses like that of Kent State.

Doubts on U.S. Policy

American policy today is haunted by doubt, perplexity and uncertainty and its friends no longer know what to expect. One day it seems that domestic pressures or midterm elections are calling the tune, the next it is the military, the next the sincere and deeply-held convictions of the President.

-From the South China Morning Post (Hong Kong).

President Nixon's Cambodia speech last week ended with the assurance that he has "rejected all political considerations" in making his decision, that "whether I may be a one-term President is insignificant." But at the moment, that is not the prime question. More important is whether, in the event of renewed serious unrest on the home front, the United States would remain capable of any foreign policy action. A state of paralysis was very nearly reached under Lyndon Johnson, How will it be now, after the market bust of the last few days and in view of mounting racial tensions?

If expectations are fulfilled that the move into Cambodia will prove of equal consequence as MacArthur's historic landing at Inchon, Korea, all Nixon'e problems will be over. But if those military experts prove right who view the new operations with great skepticism, we may expect greater difficulties on the home front. According to reports, all is going well so far. If this trend continues. the talk will be of Nixon's "master stroke" If not, the result will be serious internal difficulties which may also affect the country's ability to act in the sphere of foreign

One day he speaks with the uttermost sincerity about the sanctity of every human life, including the sanctity of enemy lives, and the next he sends over 100 bombers into North Vietnam. One day he pro-claims the independent sovereignty of national states and announces the end of the era of confrontstion, and the next he eends an expeditionary force, uninvited, across netional frontiers to confront the

This is a delicate and distastatul subject, for nobody can be sure what motivates any man, let alone so complex a man as President Nixon, but the wild contradictions of recent days and weeks and the tracic consequences on the university campuses cannot be separated from the character and personality of the President, and it is therefore important to try to understand what we are seeing.

In recent weeks, the President has faced a number of disappointments. The inflation has not responded to his policies as he had hoped. It has produced turnoil on the labor front and there is far more to come. His projected budget surplus has disappeared, the stock market is in a spin, and this has alarmed his natural constituents in

Meanwhile, his efforts to end the war have also been a disappointment. On the one hand, he is under pressure from the universities. the churches, the press and the Congress to get out faster, and from the military to stick or get out slower. And the enemy, watching him withdraw, has refused to negotiate in Paris, and the Soviets have sent their pilots and technicians into action in the Arab-

Israeli war. Nixon has reacted to all this like an actor on the world stage, each day playing a different role. One day there is Nixon the Unifier, praising the Congress, and the next there is Nixon the Scrapper, vilifying the Senate on Carswell and Haynsworth, or Nixon the "Tough Guy," dropping his "Ge" at the Pentagon and characterizing the university militants as "burns."

The interesting thing about this role-playing is that he plays the Peacemaker and the Warrior with equal passion and outward conviction. He deplores the weakness of authority and the decline of institutions with as much zeal as he attacks the Senate, appoints undistinguished men to the Supreme Court and invades Cambodia without consulting the Congress. In short, there seems to be no conbooks every day.

The actual facts of the Cambodian invasion are not as important produced the invasion. The bomb-Ironicalviolence are the students who are now so angry that they want to concentrate on more counterviolence. But who needs it? What is needed now is a few days of calm serious talk in the universities about where we are after these latest presidential spasms of caprice, and the careful and massive organization of the students to work seriously in the congressional elections, beginning immediately, in order to restore an effective political oppo-

This being the 16th anniversary of Mr. Nixon's well-remembered speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, advocating American intervention to rescue the French at Dien Bien Phu, & seemed natural enough to read the account of the 18th year of the war which ended Athenian de-thocracy 2,400 years ago.

There is found the story of the Athenian conquest of Melos, "a colony of Lacedsemon that would not submit to the Athenians like the other islanders and at first remained neutral and took no part in the struggle."

Although the envoys from Athens -representatives of the ancient world's highest civilization—exworld's highest civilization—ex-plained to the stubborn colony's leaders that "as the world goes, right is only in question between squals in power, while the strong do what they can and the week suffer what they must," the Mellans obstinately declined to yield.

So Athens was put to the bother of conquest, "and subsequently sent out 500 colonists and inhabited the place themselves . . and the win-ter ended and with it ended the 16th year of this war.

"Early in the spring of the foilowing summer"—a time exactly as far removed from the start of the Peloponnesian War as we are today from Dien Bien Phu-"the Athen-ian envoys strived from Sicily, and the Egestaeans with them. The Athenians held an assembly, and after hearing from the Egesteeans and their own envoys a report as attractive as it was untrue ... voted to send 80 ships to Sicily.

Names of the Game "They were to help the Eges-tacans against the Selimmtines"— the names were as confusing then as they are today; that is one of the persistent aggravations of for-eign wars—"and to order all other matters in Sicily as they should deem best for the interest of Athens.

Tive days after this, a second. assembly was held, to consider the speedlest means of equipping the ships, and to vote whatever else might be required by the generals for the expedition; and Nicias, who had been chosen for the command against his will and who thought that the state was not well ad-vised . . upon a slight and spe-cious pretext to aspire to the conwest of the whole of Sicily, came forward in the hope of diverting the Athenians from the enterprise. Thucydides then gives this paraphrase of Nicies's speech: -

"Although this assembly was convened to consider the preparations to be made for sailing to Sicily, I think ... that we ought not to give so little consideration to a matter of such moment, or let ourselves be persuaded by foreigners into undertaking a war with which we have nothing to do. . . .

War in Cambodia

James Reston, in "The Heart of the Trouble," (HFT, May 4). accuses President Nixon of deciding to expand the war in Indo-chins by sending the GIs into Cambodia to clear out the enemy's sanctuaries there. The President, being only human could have meds a tragic mistake. For the heart of the trouble, as everybody knows, is not in Cambodis, but in North Vietnam, the Soviet Union and Communist China. Those are the places where the power conve from, where the real sanctuaries are located. Therefore, if, instead of Cambodia, the President had ordered our troops to invade either Russia or China, as Mr. Reston seems to suggest, the war would be all over in practically no time all over the world, I mean.

I am not one of "the allens majority" which President Nixon thinks approves his policies in general. But I am one of those Americans who, however reluctantly, thinks his country'e policies in Southeast Asia are the right policies if the world is not to be Communist dominated. A good deal of ridicule has been heaped upon those of us who have foreseen the danger of the Communist strategy called "the domino theory." But those of us who have carefully read Lenin know that it is the strategy clearly outlined for "permanent revolution." He saw it begin with small victories, gradually extending into world conquest. He saw its beginning in

I read with amssement the column from Jerusalem by Joseph Alsop in the HT of April 28, Does Mr. Alsop believe that Egypt should open its skies to Israeli Phantom Jets to drop napalm and time bombs on different targets including factories and schools, as the only way to insure the safety and security of Israel? And does he believe that if Egypt reorganized its defense system against the previously daily Israeli air raids, the security and safety of Israel would be at stake?

The road to Israel's safety and security is still open. I do believe that if Israel announced tomorrow it would withdraw its troops from all the occupied Arab territories While South Vietnam has not and if Israel set a date for such an act, Israel would have what it talks about too much: Peace.

Israeli officials in Mr. Alsop's words, "Israel's great Prime Minister Golda Meir, the brilliant Defense Minister Gen. The Supreme Court action took the Matesa case one dangerous step forward toward a denouement which many observers believe could discredit the team of technocrats to which Gen. ## 43 Events and a Lot of Erotic Trash

By Thomas Quant Curtiss

CANNES, May 6.—There are 43 events today at the Cannes Festival, many of them, of course, taking place simultaneously. New films are not only being shown in the various rooms at the festival palace, but also at the local cinemas in the hope of attracting the attention of visiting exhibitors and critics.

The quantity is enormous and the quality, in large measure. quostionable. A whole series of sensational sex films are on show. These range from an American art film known as "The Notorious Cleopatra"—the Queen of Egypt is here a lady of color with a throng of stripped Hollywood oxtras as her courtiers—to a German study of sexual peculiarities, "Tho Perversions of Love," graphically illustrated. There is enough erotic trash at Cannes to fill the cheap movio houses of the world for the next year.

The day began at midnight with a late showing of the American film "Putney Swope," in which modern hig-business bromides are burlesqued by a band of ovangelist-minded blacks. They take over a Madison Avenue advertising agency, defiantly refusing to plug tobacco, alcohol and war toys. Eventually, they bow to pressure. This attempt at satirical extravaganza is more foulmouthed than funny, the comic spoofing degenerating into shock gags with race insults flying.

"Putney Swope" is reported to have found a cult public in New York. But judging from the

Adenauer's Old Masters To Be Auctioned in June

ONDON, May 6.-A group of 36 "highly important" old masters, once the collection of the late West German Chancel-lor, Dr. Konrad Adenager, are to be sold at Christie's, the London art auctioneers, on June 26.

. The sale is on behalf of Mr. Heins Kisters, who helped Dr. Adenauer to assemble his collection, and of several anonymous vendors. Mr. Kisters lives near Lake Constance in Switzerland.

The paintings appear to have been re-assembled for sale as a collection, according to informed sources, at the instigation of some relatives and other bene-ficiaries under Dr. Adenauer's will who preferred to dispose of the paintings which they had inherited.

They turned to Mr. Kisters as the man who had helped form the collection, to either buy, or acquire the sale rights for, the remainder because of the advantages of selling all 36 works as a complete collection, the sources said. For the most part the pic-

Exploring Neo-Classical Trends in Florenc

By William Weaver

FLORENCE, May 6.—The announced theme of this year's Maggio Musicale Florentino, the Florence music festival which opened last night, is "Art Between the Two World Wars." But the Maggio's artistic director, Roman Vlad, in an introductory article in the festival's souvenir program, explains that it is the neo-classical trend of art in the twenties and thirties which will be most thoroughly explored in the course of the two months of the festival; and this emphasis on neo-classicism, accounts for the choice of Spontini's "The Vestal" as the Maggio's

Originally given in Paris in 1807, "The Vestal. both in subject-matter and in musical style, is the Napoleonic opera par excellence, and in its day it was a huge success (by 1830, it had been performed two hundred times at the Paris Opera). admired by Berlioz and Beethoven. True to its time, the piece contains a good deal of martial music, the pageantry of triumph that was so much a part of the empire. But there are also many pages of heart-melting lyricism, and if, on oc-casion, Spontini echoes Beethoven or seems to look back to Gluck, in other moments he clearly anticipates Bellini and even Donizetti. The conducting of Vittorio Gui, last night, un-derlined this kinship and the 85-year-old maestro seemed more interested in the romantic aspects

Margin Slash Analyzed as Bullish | N.Y. Stocks Rally High,

By Terry Robards

NEW YORK, May 6 (NYT) .- Just as everything looked darkest and the stock market seemed headed nowhere but further down, the Federal Reserve Board acknowledged the strident call of Wall Street and slashed margin requirements to 65 percent from 80 percent.

Very fundamentally, the move is bullish. It means more buying power suddenly has been unleashed for investors, for they will be able to purchase more stock with the same money, by only having to put up 65 percent of the purchase Increasing buying power for investors, however.

does not necessarily mean they will be in the mood to commit their cash to the securities markets. The amount of money that flows into the market will depend on whether attitudes have improved and there can be no assurance that changed margin rules will mean more optimism. Timing Usually Good

Nevertheless, history suggests that reductions in margin requirements mean better stock markets are around the corner. "The Fed's timing usually bas been pretty good." says Robert H. Stovall, partner in charge of investment policy for Reynolds & Co. There have been six previous reductions in margin requirements since the end of World War II. "Except in 1953," he reports, "each of the cuts caught the market close to the bottom. This shows that Washington really does have one eye on Wall Street"

The last time a cut was implemented was in July, 1962, in the wake of the May crash of that year. The reduction was from 70 percent to 50 percent. The market bottomed out that month and went on to form the base for a sustained

A glance at the charts of the Dow Jones indus-trial average provides clear evidence, in fact, that margin cuts have tended either to coincide with a market bottom or have occurred shortly after an uptrend has started-at least in the postwar

This does not mean that changes in margin requirements can change the direction of the stock market. It merely means that the Fed tends to implement margin changes within a few months of market bottoms.

'A Positive Sign'

"I think it's another positive sign that things are not getting worse, but are getting better." said Alan R. Shaw, vice-president and director of market research or Harris, Upham & Co. "We think it would be prudent to cover any shorts that may be outstanding."

Mr. Shaw said ne expected a "testing phase" to occur, following a brief rally. "I wouldn't want to say we've seen the lows," he asserted, "but I think we're darn close to it."

Monte J. Gorden, vice-president for research at Bache & Co., said that "it should aid the market in finding a bottom. Historically, bow-ever, margin changes don't change the trend of market right away. They usually show their effects in several months," Technical analysts are quick to point out that no selling climax has occurred. The erosion of share prices has, with only a few exceptions worth noting, been slow and steady, without panic selling or tumultuous volume. Many analysts are still expecting a day or two of deep declines, with the Dow Jones industrials down 20 or more points and turnover mounting to 20 million shares or more per session. Only then, they say, will the purge be over and the stage be set for an advance.

DISSENT IN THREE AMERICAN WARS By Samuel Elfot Morison, Frederick Merk and Frank Freidel, Harvard University Press. Illustrated. 104 pp. $4,95.

Reviewed by Marcus Confife

THIS book originated as a trio of lectures delivered at Massachusetts Historical. Society by three members from Harvard—two emeritus professors and one still in full herness. The sim was "to remind our audience that disagreement was a phenom of the other wars in which this nation has engaged and is not restricted to America's unpopular involvement in the Vietnam struggle."

States was stampeded into war in 1846. President Polk, bend-ing history and geography to suit himself, announced to Congress that Mexico had attacked U.S. troops on U.S. soil, so that the country was already in effect at war. This dubious claim was used by Polk's supporters to rush a war bill through Congress after a mere two hours of debate. Once the war was a fait accompli, the sizable Whig and anti-slavery opposition was severely inhibited by the knowl-edge that resistance to the Polk administration would be represented as unpatriotic, and might indeed jeopardize the lives of U.S. soldiers.

In the third essay, on the Spanish-American War, Frank Freidel stresses the initial conviction of President McKinley and others that war was the best means of ending the protracted horror of Spanish repression in Cuba; the subsequent corrupting of U.S. prin-ciples in the ugly campaign against the Filipino insurrectionists: and the lonely defiance of such anti-imperialists as Senator George F. Hoar, William James, and Mark Twain. So here we have still more testimony, apparently, for the radical reconsideration of the national dossier that some younger :historians are now attempting. 'A cartoon of 1847 shows the proud Mexican eagle humiliatingly deputed of its reathers. I take this to be a prowar cartoon, but that does not affect the point that here seemingly is the historic image of U.S. conduct: "War hawk". The very expression goes back as far as 1812. The record can be interpreted as a century-anda-half of aggression mitigated only by the protests of a minor-ity of courageous doves. True, the facts are no secret; they have been discussed for many years by historians, including this particular distinguished trio. A radical reader might answer that the facts have evidently not registered deep ing "consensus" view. Where though, shall we come out? The problem of war illustrates the been a great deal of dissension over every major U.S. conflict, at least in its initial stages Nowadays the pacifist position is being widely expounded. This position—that all wars are wrong seems to me morally and logically a strong one. It tional psyche since Colonia days, and has embodied a vision of the United States as a modest nation of modest men. But very few have held to this extreme position. In practice most Americans, radical or conservative, have believed that some wars, notably wars of liberation, are just and mus be fought. Also, nearly every war can be defined as a liber ating endeavor, and be quit honestly regarded as such by participants on both sides. This defense established East's those who lead the middle card and those who lead low.

DHYB. PLAN?

Most New York experts lead the bottom card, but in this case the traditional lead of the high card works out better because it is clear that the player making the lead has no high card in the suit.

North's jump to two notrump, as a passed hand re-sponding to one spade, ac-curately suggested a balanced hand with 11 or 12 points, but South went wrong in rebidding his spades. As his hand was entirely satisfactory for notrump purposes, he should have raised to three no-trump, which would have been easily made.

North might have passed three spades, but he persevered to four spades, and West led the club eight, playing "the top of nothing in such situations. East won with the club ace and concentrated on the possibility that West might have the king of hearts, thereby finding the fine winning defense.

His play at the second trick was the beart two. West's heart king was taken by dummy's ace, and South entered his band with a spade lead. He led a low diamond hopefully, and all would have been well for him if West bad ducked routinely. East would have been unable to lead a second heart without conceding a trick

New Englanders, and many other Americans, had fairly good reason to be more enthusiastic over the defeats of Napoleon than over the amorphous ac-tivities of their own conflict with Britain. Tha suprema trony for Morison is that the War of 1812—the "most unpopular war that this country has ever waged"-became "our most popular war when it was Frederick Merk focuses on the way in which the United TAKEN DOWN.—Faraway Son was disqualified after finishing first last Sonday in the French 2000 Guineas at Longchamp for allegedly blocking Breton. Daniel Wildenstein, owner of Faraway Son, argues that these pictures show his colt to have caused no trouble to Lester Piggott aboard Breton, and in fact, show Piggott bothering Bill Williamson, the jockey of Care, who was placed first in the race. In the photo at right, taken when the horses were about 100 yards from the finish line, Faraway Son seems clear of his rivals. Meanwhile, Wildenstein says, Piggott (on the horse in the middle) can be seen leaning on Williamson instead of trying to avoid him. Williamson, contends Wildenstein, was so busy trying to get away from Piggott, that he allowed Care (No. 1) to lese his bit (circle). In the photo underneath, Wildenstein points out that Pyers has a tight rein on Faraway Son, a clear winner, just a stride or two before the finish line (photo-finish mirror on left) Piggott, who threw back his head just before finish in what observers thought was an attempt to fake the effects of a bumping, does not seem disturbed here. He and Williamson both have let out the reins on their mounts.

One Horse Disqualified, Owner Threatens to Scratch 300

By James Brown

PARIS, May 6 (NYT).—Da-niel Wildenstein, the millionaire art dealer, sald today he was seriously considering liquidating his 300-horse stable in France and racing abroad because of the disqualification ot his American colt, Faraway Soo, as winner in the French 2,000 Guineas at Longchamp Sunday. Wildenstein and his son Alec, in an interview at the Wildenstein headquarters near the Champs Elysées, said they plan-ned to appeal the stewards' decision for the record but added they had no hopes of Faraway Son, by the Ameri-

The 3-year-old was taken down from first place and classed third for having blocked Breton in the last strides of the $97,000 Poule d'Essai des Poulains, the French equivalent of the 2,000 Guineas, run over one mile. Faraway Son's jockey, Bill Pyers of Aus tralia, was suspended for four

The elder Wildensteto said, "I have no illusions about an appeal, but I am very disappointed. I wanted to make French breeding the first in the world but if someone is seeking to make trouble for me, I will liquidate everything and I will go ahroad to race my horses." He contends that Faraway Son did bend or verge slightly to the left in front of Breton, but only after crossing the finish line. Lester Piggott threw back his photos clearly show Faraway Son had it won. the affair is why the stewards did not sound the horn earlier and call in Williamson and Piggott, who were conducting a regular old brawl all the way down the stretch behind Faraway Son. High-speed photos clearly show the two jockeye comtog in contact many times with elbows, arms and whips. ## Ali's 'Best Shot' Will Be in Court, Not Ring

By Robert Lipsyte

NEW YORK, May 6 (NYT) .- It is more than three years now since Muhammad Ali refused to take the step forward that would have made him Pvt. Cassius Clay. Since then, Ali has starred in a Broadway mnsical, begun work on an authobiography and served several day: in the Dade County (Miami, Fla.) jail for an old charge of driving without a license. He became a father, A rather polished speaker on the campus circuit, and a frequent guest on television talk shows. He appeared in a grotesque comedy called a "computer boxing match" in which Rocky Marciano defeated him for the mythical leavyweight championship of all time. He recently filmed some interviews for a documentary of his career to be released later this year.

But he has not boxed a round in tha prize ring because no state or city athletic commission in this country has been willing or able to license him. Last month, however, the commission in Ontario agreed go license him for a fight in July, against Prazier, in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gars. This week, the court of appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in New Orleans, is excan take place. The judge, John Minor Wisdom, is considered "a Southern liberal," and a long-time Ali adviser and lawyer, Robert Arum, considers this "nur best shot." All is currently free on ball pending his appeal on a conviction of refusing to sub-ball is that he must remain in the continental United States sudge Wisdom's court has been petitioned to extend ball so that All may go to Toronto for 24 hours in July.

All's record in courts is not as good as his record in the ring. Hs was originally convicted in U.S district court in Houston in June of 1957. He was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000. Eleven months later the court of appeals affirmed the conviction and the sentence. In March of 1969, the case took a turn. The Supreme Court, while never reviewing the merits of his appeal, remanded the case back to the district court to determine whether evidence gathered by illegal wiretaps had been used to convict Ali.

The district court, in July, decided that the wiretaps had not been used, and resentenced Ali. There had also been false hope at tha time that Judge Joe Ingraham might reduce his original sentence. Four of the five taped conversations in question were turned over to All's lawyer during tha trial; the fifth according to the judge had been obtained legally and revealing it publicly would endanger national security. That decision is now being appealed in New Orleans. The circuit court might decide that all the wiretap conversations should be turned over to Ali's lawyers, in which event the case starts again in district court; or that the wiretap conversations did have a material import on Alf's conviction, in which event there will be a new trial, or it may affirm the district court'e decision, in which svent this case will move on to the Supreme Court.

number of smaller battles, most recently an attempt to force the New York State Athletic Commission to license him. In his decision last December, federal Judge Marvin E. Frankel stated that "the commission was well within the bounds of rationality when it concluded that the conviction and five-year sentence in this case justified refusal of the 1969 application,"

Through it all, surprisingly few public voices were raised in All's defense, despite the unpopularity of the Vietnam war and the hungry political quest for student support and black votes. The stance of the athletic commission was presumably dictated by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller; Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, who recently found heroism in other youths who refused to serve, has not taken a public stand on All. A number of politicians have refused to speak out for him, and the only man willing to mention it during the current gubernatorial campaign in New York is Robert M. Morgenthau, an underdog candidate for the Democratic nomination.

A week ago, Morgenthau stated that Ali's case was a further example of "the closed system" in which "a few make the decisions for the many." He said that Ali should not he deprived of his livelihood while waiting for the court's ultimate dis-position of his case. He stated: "If he is eventually declared innocent by the Supreme Court, the commission will have deprived him of three years of boxing at the height of his career. There is no way that can be given back to him.";

President's Computer

WASHINGTON.—It is not generally known but there is a top-secret computer, located within the continental limits of the United States, which has stored in its memory bank all the reasons that a President can use to justify military actions without the consent of Congress. This computer makes it possible for the commanderin-chief in a matter of moments to pro-course of action. As soon as President Nixon made his decision to invade Cambodia, the computer went into action. A White House speech writer who was plugged into the computer tapped out the following message:

"WHAT WOULD BE OUR REASON FOR GOING INTO CAMBODIA?"

The computer replied, "TO SHORTEN THE WAR IN VIET-NAM." The speech writer tapped back, "WHY ARE WE GOING IN AT THIS TIME?"

"BECAUSE THE ENEMY HAS REEN USING CAMBODIA AS A VAST STAGING AREA AND refuge which has be-COME INTOLERABLE."

The Upkeep on a Mansion in Britain

By Maxine Molyneux

LONDON. May 6.—Aristocratic owners of famous historic houses in England may not have much cash-but they do have acres of priceless land, works of art lining every wall and assorted uther inherited treasures. Why, then should they be in financial difficulty? After all, the sale of one good painting would keep the average man in luxury for the rest of his life.

But British tax laws are singularly unsympathatic to the leisured classes. If a painting were sent for sale, it would be the Exchequer that would profit, not the owner. And, generation after generation, as death doties bite into hereditary fortunes, many "stately home" owners have been forced to open their e.egant gates to the public-theoretically, an ideal solution, the owners gaining a new source of income (admission fees) and the public a chance to see some of the nation's most valuable treasures. But putting theory into practice is not always easy. There are now more than 1,000 houses. castles and gardens open to the public in Britain. Just under half are still privately owned. Last year, about 12 million tourists visited these monuments. Statistics like these would seem to indi-cate that even privately owned homes should be "operating" in the black, particularly in view of the assistance given owners by the British Tourist Association and other groups. But many are finding it impossible to make ends meet. Such was the lesson to be drawn from held recently in London. Consider, for example, the case of Wilton House which has been in the family of Sidney Charles Herbert, 16th Earl of Pembroke and 13th Earl of Montgomery, for more than 400

the conference of historic house owners

After a fire in 1647, Wilton House was rebuilt to designs by Inigo Jones. It contains a distinguished collection of furniture and works of art, as well as Jones's famous staterooms, among the masterpleces of interior decoration. Be-tween 70,000 and 80,000 visitors a year bring in an annual return of over £20,000 ($48,0001, "but we are still losing about £3,000 ($7,200) a year on the house," said Lord Pembroke.

"I sometimes wonder if it's worth it. It costs around £6,000 ($14,400; just to open a house to the public: Facilities have to be built, literature prepared, additional etaff employed, but if we didn't open, we should be losing about another £8,000 ($14,400) a year, so it is a question of having to, really."

One of the greatest problems besetting owners of old houses is the astronomical repair bill for which a maximum grant of only 50 percent can be obtained from the government. An architectural survey has just been carried out on Wil-ton Rouse and on the 18th-century Palladian bridgs on the grounds. Both, if they are to survive, will have to be almost totally rebuilt.

The bridge would cost an estimated £14,000 ($33,600) and the house about a quarter of a million pounds ($600,000) to restore," said Lord Pembroke. In addition, "the central heating has just been repiped, costing us £10,000 ($24,000) which is not considered a repair and therefore not eligible for a grant.

"At the moment," he continued. "we are planning a ten-year schedule for repairs, and for the most immediate tasks it looks as though it will work out at between £4,500 and £5,000 ($10,800-$12,000) a year. What does seem to me to be most unfair, is that if a house is very famous and the owner can no longer afford to live in it, the govern-ment will take it over and spend a great deal more of everybody's money than the owner would have ever epent, A private owner and his family look after the property at no public cost what-soever, and run it far more economically (and at his own loss) than the state." Lord Pembroke's point of view was shared by many of the lords, ladies and gentlemen-for once, accurately describ-ed-at the recent London meeting.

Apart from taxation, which weighs heavily on the owners, the most common grievance is "complete lack of government cooperation."

Brian Thompson of Puttenden Manor, who loses £5,000 ($13,000) a year on his house, said vehemently. 'I don't want charity, grants or assistance—just a little cooperation. Local authorities are disinterested and unhelpful, planning permission is constantly turned down and life is not just difficult—it's a perpetual nightmare"

The picture, for many owners, is bleak and scarcely an encouragement to wouldbe saviors who might come to the rescue of other houses rapidly going to ruin. Lord Kennet pointed out that the Ministry of Housing and Local Government of which he is the parliamentary secretary removes about 266 "stately homes" from the official list each year. These houses are "lost" either by being demolished or by falling into a hopeless state of disrepair.

But, as one owner of a small-but still stately—home put it, "They are all making a tremendous fuss. Hardship is relative. We manage all right, really. Our place is open only on Sundays and Wednesdays from May till September and we had 20,000 visitors last year, which was enough to pay for the upkeep of the house (which we could never do before), and has paid for all the repairs and for central heating to be installed throughout the house. They're doing all right out of tourism. They've never had
